

Greetings! This is Phil (a USA citizen) who is currently staying at the Frankfurt Frankfurt Airport (TXL) and who has arrived in Germany for the past week. I was in the game development program in Cambridge, Massachusetts and I've been developing my portfolio Game at Ubisoft. When I am not working on a game, I am sleeping. Fortunately, I can be found almost every evening at PlayStation America. ABOUT THE DEVELOPERS Greetings! We are the dev team for Elden Ring and we have been developing games for many years. I am Joshua, the game's producer. I have worked in both of the AAA markets (PS3/Xbox 360) and indies (PC) working for many years. Matt is also a hard working programmer with a variety of experience ranging from AAA to indies. He started working on Elden Ring at the beginning of the year and has worked tirelessly to bring the game to a state where the public can enjoy it. Heather has been working with Josh for several years and she specializes in marketing and content. She has extensive experience managing large teams and working with other small indie game companies. Hera has been involved in the game design for a long time. She has a huge passion for the game and brings an artistic eye to the team. She has been involved in the game design for a long time. Pteridoscopic pre-surgical diagnosis of a previously undiagnosed neoplasm. A 55-year-old man who had been previously diagnosed as having a varix of the testis with normal serum markers, with no clinical signs of recurrence for a minimum period of 6 years, presented with a persistent elevation of these markers. A pteridoscopy through the inguinal canula showed a site of abnormal growth without malignancy, and subsequently a varix of the left testis was found and closed. A tumour was diagnosed at the site of the pteridoscopic "dub" and subsequently removed at surgery. It was histologically a testicular low-grade malignant melanoma, not previously identified at an outpatient clinic and devoid of melanoma specific markers. This case demonstrates the value of this non-invasive examination for the first identification of intrascrotal neoplasms, in a patient with normal markers, who is liable to present a higher risk of concomitant tumour recurrence.
