Zombie Desperation is a small horror game where you shoot hordes of zombies until you die, aiming to obtain a higher rank in the online leaderboards while unlocking new scenarios and weapons. It is a port of a shooting gallery mobile game released back in 2011, improved with several of the features that this platform has to offer. Battle for your life in six scenarios, shooting and exploding zombies, picking up weapons and support items before the screen overloads with zombies. Careful, some may want to see you up close before you become their dinner. Lol at the description I wish I could play it. Great game but it is way to simple and boring. Wish the game devs made it a lot better. Lots of cool games over on steam. If you guys picked that up right the game devs will be as happy as you are. I enjoyed playing this game but I still think it needs more content to make it really worth it. But still a really decent game. The thing that I really liked about it was that it had way more competition on steam than I had expected. I'm not very good at the game though...so I got a really low score. Love this game. In fact I just bought it and I'm playing it right now, but the thing that I really love is that for some reason I'm still able to play the game while I'm on the toilet and when I got that achievement I was like, no way, that's ridiculous lol. It's a bit of a letdown when I got back to my computer and I'm back to square one. I'm far from the best player for sure... I wish the leaderboards would update faster though. I'm just laughing at some of my friends that are beating me left and right. I also really wish that Valve removed Steam trading cards. I won't buy them in the future. I played this game for a bit. It's not that bad, but I'm not sure if I'll continue to play it. I found the leaderboards to be kind of tedious (nothing wrong with that, it just wasn't that fun) and the naming of the weapons could be better (this is a shooter game, not a match-3 puzzle game). I tried playing through the first scenario a few times and got pretty good at it, but I'm not so sure about the rest. In the end, it's not a bad game, but it's just not my style of play. It has

Description: Sequel to the original game: Spoiler (click to show/hide): Spoiler (click to show/hide): This is the official sequel of Not Dead Yet Game Key campaign. Dark Dragon Adventures is a character building tactical RPG set in the world of the original Not Dead Yet Game Key Campaign. You will play as Kaelal, the brother of dying heroine Adalyn and join a quest to find the "old god" Adalyn who can have the magic of the forest bring back life to her. Together with the new friend and companion Walanel, son of the gloomy forest, Kaelal starts his journey to make amends for the tragedy that struck the village of Little Rity. This time Adalyn and her friend Dagmar has each of them a personal quest they'll have to complete. Can three teenagers who don't really know what it is they stand for complete all these objectives? There are twenty three main quests, with side quests inspired by the events of the first two campaigns. Five characters, Master Chief, Kaelal, Dagmar, Spike and Vega, have their stories to unfold over the duration of the game. From the comic books to the game, it is known that the hero Adalyn is a reincarnation of a god. As always in the teachings of Adalyn, pain, corruption and suffering will determine our fate. Not Dead Yet Game is a action RPG with tactical elements. It's up to you to free the fairy's master Adalyn, find out if she's really a god or if she's just a human, reveal the secrets of the forest, make it home safely, or die on an adventure you'll never forget. True to its name: you will die 100 000 times at the end of all three campaigns. Each time you will wake up in a different scenario with a new character. The character Kael tray of food left, and the achondrie can still smell the cheese, though it's beginning to sit heavy on its breaths with all the good food gone. Jan-accidondnie's glance flickers down towards the lettuce on his plate for a while, and then back up again. The two _toison-d'arame_, the backsides of the fish that the _Galaxen_ had for a while dyed to a strange light purple, but of which they're become sick of now, and the cabbage the _ennui-dru_ had cooked so particularly well has gone. Everything seems to be uninteresting to him, though he's always been a person who looked pretty good even on dead food and didn't mind getting his teeth and lips dirty in the effort of eating it. It was, however, a type of food which was beginning to get a bit tiresome to him, and when he managed to get upstairs finally, which had been difficult, he sat down on his old bed, which was still covered with a few other things that had been left there when the room was first made his
