The immune system in HIV-infected patients may interact with HCV coinfection to promote immune activation, chronic liver disease and accelerated progression of HIV infection. Here, we studied the clinical and biological profile of HIV-1-infected patients with HCV coinfection compared to patients infected with HCV alone. We studied 270 patients who had been treated for at least 3 months, an average of 16 months. The following variables were studied: HBV and HDV antibodies, serum HCV RNA, biochemical tests, CD4 cell count, viral load and HIV-1 genotyping. CD4 count and HIV viral load were significantly higher in patients coinfected with HCV, but this coinfection did not determine more rapid progression of HIV infection. In coinfected patients, HCV RNA was greater in the group with lower CD4 cell count, but it was not associated with more rapid progression of HIV infection. Genotyping of the patients showed that in coinfected patients, the distribution of HIV-1 subtypes was not different from the one observed in the main genotype of

I'm concerned about the possibility of the user deleting the already existing record while editing the other. Is it better to add "ON DUPLICATE KEY UPDATE" to the updatemodel method or to make it the top of a transaction. I want to keep the database clean and also want to save the information of the existing record in case of duplicate. UPDATE model SET file = 1 WHERE id = '29'; SELECT file_id FROM model WHERE id = '29'; If two requests come in, and one of them is returning "1" the record will be deleted. How can I handle this? 0cc13bf012
