That i cant control the option to increase the brightness of my laptop.Q: backing data to a vector object in c++ I have a class Data, I am trying to push the data into a vector object within it. But the vector objects initialize in thier ctor, but do not give me the intial values. class Data { vector data_; ... public: Data(); void AddData(); }; I want to be able to push() data into data_, but I am getting all zeros. A: Because the assignment operator isn't defined. That would produce a compile error. You could just save the number as a float like: class Data { vector data_; FILED
